Self Adhesive Vinyl

Self-adhesive vinyl is equipped with pressure-sensitive self-adhesives.

They are comprised of:

- Facestock/Front Material
- Adhesive
- Release coating
- Backing or Liner.

Vinyl is perfect as a front material because of its flexibility. While most window films are made of polyester, our self-adhesive vinyl films are well suited to contour and curved surfaces

With a range of applications, it's important to choose the right ones based on your specific needs. The durability of self-adhesive vinyl depends on several factors.

- The required period of use (days/months/years)
- The type of surface (metal, plastic, glass, painted/unpainted)
- Horizontal or vertical application (which influences exposure to UV, weather, and pollution)
- Climate conditions (seaside, mountains, desert)
- Type of conversion (printed, laminated, ink type)

Types of Adhesive Vinyl

Sign Cut Films
Sign Cut Films vs Digital Print Films
Films are produced in a variety of colors, which are cut into shapes, lettering, etc, and applied as signage.
Digital Print Films

Digital Print films usually have an overlaminate film applied over the top to protect the print surface

There are 2 methods used for producing vinyl films: calendering and casting.

Calendered films:

The production process for vinyl results in a film usually used for flat or simple curves

Cast films:
A production process that results in a more conformable film, used for curved surfaces
